President's Corner

What an Awesome Rendezvous 2023!!

By Dana Chambers, BCHW President

f you did not attend, you missed a great weekend! The weather was beautiful, the tack sale was huge, and the socializing was amazing and fun. We are already working on Rendezvous 2024, so stay tuned!

I want everyone to understand that this event is one of two Statewide fundraisers we hold every year. As with most everything these days, costs have gone up on food and the cost to rent the event enter as well. We do our best to put on a great weekend for everyone. Volunteers do a lot of hard work, and I think we should thank them! It takes a village to put on these big events, and we could use more volunteers. So, if anyone is interested in joining the team for Rendezvous and/ or the Winery Ride, please let us know!!

We do our best to keep all our members informed of what is happening within the organization. We use the state Facebook page, emails, your Chapter Leadership, and the state website. If you are not getting the emails from the state, please let us know so we can figure out why.

I congratulate all our amazing volunteers who received an award at the annual Membership Meeting. Photos and write-ups are in this edition, so take a look.

Speaking of volunteers, I am asking that all of you who work out on the trails, those who volunteer their time holding leadership positions, and those who help with events, etc., please complete and turn in your volunteer hours. It may not seem important to you, but it is. They are very impressed when we show our partners, collaborators, and elected officials how much time and equivalent dollars we spend volunteering! So, get a form from your chapter leadership or off the State website, fill it out monthly, and turn them into

Volunteering May/June 2023

Volunteering with Passion

By Ken Carmichael

olunteering is a way of serving your community. There are excellent opportunities in Washington to volunteer.

To actively volunteer is to provide a service. This means rendering assistance, helping, to be of use, to contribute and to promote.

Our communities need volunteers with PASSION. This starts with thinking about what lights your fire. What are you passionate about? Who or what needs your help? Then evaluate your experience, talents, skills and abilities combined with your time commitment.

Some people run for public office, others join boards of nonprofit organizations and others volunteer to be there when they are needed most.

I read an article once that provided the key motivation factors in volunteering. They are:

- To help others
- To be involved in their community
- To contribute to a cause
- To develop new skills and have new experiences
- To use their skills in a productive way
- To stay mentally and physically fit

I will add another and that is the social aspect of being around others with common interests.

Volunteering can be very rewarding with a feeling of personal satisfaction. A good example of all these benefits of volunteering is being around other equestrians. BCHW meets all of these criteria. Just ask any BCHW member after a work party or other volunteer activity.

I do not have the statistics about the amount of work done by volunteers or the number of people involved throughout Washington but I know from experience that these individuals make a difference in our communities.

One thing about volunteering is that you get to choose what, when, where and how you work and with whom. Typically, people choose those activities based on previous interests.

My interests gravitate towards the boat and horses. Being a trail rider, I am interested in keeping trails open on our public lands. BACK COUNTRY HORSEMEN OF WASHINGTON does this with 30 chapters spread across the state. In Spokane, I belong to the Ponderosa chapter (PBCH) where we primarily work with the county, State Parks and Bureau of Land Management. PBCH provides the opportunity for education, advocacy and helping on the ground with trailheads and trails. And those that actively participate have lots of fun doing it.

Take the first step and contact an organization where you can express your passion. The four I am proud of being associated with include: Ponderosa Back Country Horsemen keeping trails open, Riverside State Park Foundation and Friends of Mt. Spokane State Park supporting our great park system and Lake Spokane Association helping to preserve a beautiful lake.

If you have ever considered contributing to your community through volunteering, then this is a good time to get started. I encourage everyone to find some way to volunteer in your interests. Make it a priority. You can do it as an individual or as a family. Of course, I encourage everyone to volunteer through BCHW and the many chapters. Choose an area where you are passionate and make a difference in your life and someone else's.

Bottom line, volunteer to make our communities better and find a fit that is FUN for you.

Spring is Tick Season

By Sue Davis

ith as much time as we BCHW'ers spend in the back country riding and maintaining trails, sooner or later we are bound to encounter ticks, either on us or our critters. While finding a tick crawling up your pant leg or burrowed into your horse's chest can be alarming, with a little knowhow, they are easily dispatched. Fortunately for us Washingtonians, there are only a few cases of tick-borne illnesses reported each year in our state.

First things first, To remove a tick that has attached to the skin and started feeding, a tick removal spoon, called "Ticked Off", is a very reliable tool (photo right). It gets the whole tick out without breaking off the head. Scrape the spoon along the skin, catching the tick in the slot, until it pulls out. I have used this to remove many ticks on my dog and horses. There are several similar tick removal devices on the market. Washington Department of Health (WDOH) advises using a tweezer, grasping the tick at skin level and pulling straight up, although I have had little success removing a tick intact with tweezers. After removing a tick, swab the bite site with alcohol or wash with soap and water.

To remove ticks on a dog before they attach, a flea comb works great (see picture to the right). Comb through the fur, especially the head area. Drop ticks into a little alcohol to kill them.

To prevent getting ticks, WDOH recommends using insect repellent containing DEET on yourself and wear clothing treated with permethrin. My vet recommended using fly spray containing permethrin on horses to repel ticks. I have also had success using a natural spray on my animals and my clothing that contains cinnamon, rosemary, peppermint, cedar and clove oils.

There are 4 common tick species in Washington. The Western black-legged tick is found west of the Cascades, and likes forested and brushy areas. These ticks can carry Lyme disease, but only a few human cases are reported in Washington each year. This tick can also carry the disease, anaplasmosis. Numerous dogs have been diagnosed with anaplasmosis, and the first human case in Washington was reported in 2022. Horses can be infected with both Lyme disease and anaplasmosis black-legged ticks on a ruler. The tick on the top is a fed, or engorged, female. A tick's body slowly enlarges to accommodate the amount of blood ingested. The bottom left tick is an unfed female. The tick on the bottom right is an unfed male.

Two other tick species found in our state are the Western dog tick and Rocky Mountain wood tick. Both are known to transmit Rocky Mountain spotted fever, although it is uncommon in Washington.

Western dog ticks are found on the east side and parts of southwest Washington. Rocky Mountain wood ticks are primarily on the east side. They are similar in appearance, and inhabit similar places like wooded areas, medium height grasses and shrubs, and sunny or open areas along the edge of woods.

2023 Rendezvous May/June 2023

If You Did Not Make it to 2023's Rendezvous, You Missed a Perfect Weekend!

By Teri Starke, BCHW Treasurer

he springtime weather in Ellensburg cooperated to make this year's event truly memorable. Every place I looked, people listened to various clinicians, demos and educational opportunities. We brought in two large outdoor awnings to maximize the number of horse demos we could accommodate. Tom Reed, a talented clinician for both horse and rider, held 2 days of hands-on learning in the Bloom. The parking lots were packed full of cars and people all weekend. You had to park out by the Western Village if you did not get there early enough in the day or camped in the usual places.

The used tack sale filled the Armory, and we plan to use all the side rooms next year. We may have broken a record in our sales! I do not think I have seen so many saddles in one place before; it seemed like there was a little of everything. Linda and her team had a spectacular first year and are working on ways to improve the sale in 2024.

The bucket, silent and live auctions had received many more donations than in past years. Missy's team did a marvelous job accepting donations and coordinating items for the silent and live auctions. Mandy and Kim really outdid themselves on the bucket auction! The tables for all the auctions were packed with fantastic items.

Cascade Mtn Grilling did a great job with concessions and Saturday night dinner. They added an outdoor awning for breakfast and lunch grilling, mmmmm.

I want to thank all the volunteers who helped. We truly could not have pulled it off without everyone's hard work. Many people contribute parts of the year and most of their weekend to make this a very successful BCHW event, and they are rock stars in my book! If you want to join the team, please get ahold of me to volunteer and tell me what area you would like to focus on.

We are now starting to plan for Rendezvous 2024; 2023 was great. What can we come up with next? Some good ideas are out there, and I will try to capitalize on them. I have heard that members want a packing competition throughout the weekend, and I have someone willing to head it up! We have been thinking about how it would look, and oh, do I have some ideas there! We will need several volunteers to make it an event, so let me know if you would like to help. Stay tuned for more information.

Our first Zoom meeting will be at the end of April 2023 to discuss what went well and to start talking about 2024. 2023 taught me that I and all the chairs need more help! If you want to contribute, please get a hold of me. If your chapter wants to sponsor a clinician or demo, please get a hold of me to start the scheduling. I already have vendors signed up for 2024, but I am always on the hunt for more! Teri Starke, treasurer@bchw.org

BCHW Sawyer Training Rendezvous 2023

n Saturday March 18th, Back Country Horsemen Saw Program held an update meeting with 19 of our Instructor Evaluators on the new Thinking Sawyer training. There have been many changes to our sawyer program, from how we register for a class to how we present classroom materials and information, field evaluation and finally, how to get the certification cards to the sawyers in the field out on the trails.

We also discussed our program budget and fund-raising ideas to help keep our program the best there is.

We get calls from different user groups, State of Washington entities, and county entities seeking Saw Certification along with DNR.

We have formed a great collaboration between WTA and EMBA doing Saw Training and Certification. This has also helped in working together on major trail maintenance work parties.

Also, BCHW held a Sawyer Classroom-only Class on Saturday afternoon with the new Thinking Sawyer PowerPoint.

With Folks From BCHW, WTA and EMBA covering the new policy changes and new PowerPoint on material and information, getting folks ready for Field Evaluation this Spring. One will be in April at Dallas Campgrounds on Hwy 410 in Greenwater and the other at Haney Meadows off Blewett Pass at the end of June.

It's Not All About The Backcountry

Setting matts on bridge.

Filling the corrals.

By Barbara Thomas

ost people associate BCHW as the organization responsible for keeping the backcountry wilderness maintained and usable for all user groups. The reality is that many chapters have a "front country" local camp and trail system that they help maintain and ensure that equines are recognized as important stewards of heavily used camps and trail systems close to more urban settings.

The advantage of these trail systems is that they are heavily used by a diverse group of people, including equine owners who have never been in the backcountry. This is our opportunity to reach out to those other user groups letting them know what a valuable asset it is to have BCHW as a partner.

A good example of a partnership is the relationship that Mt. St. Helen's chapter of BCHW has local equine groups such as Washington Trail Riders Association, Clark County Executive Horse Council, Chinook Trails Association, Pacific NW Endurance Riders, and Washington Trails Association. Recently we had two work parties at popular local camps and trails. The first one at Battle Ground State Park in Battle Ground, WA and the second at Rock Creek Horse Camp, both located in SW Washington. Between the two we had members of each group who installed causeways on the trails, cleared limbs off the trail, installed non-slip mats on bridges and added fill to corrals. Partnering with each organization expands our recognition, brings in different levels of skill sets and cements lasting relationships for years to come.

Take care not to minimize the impact of communicating this story to local media. If you have a local trail or camp that is heavily used by the community and only 25% of these users know about or belong to BCHW, this creates an opportunity to promote the advantages of belonging to and partnering with this great organization.

Cispus Multiuser Group Sawyer Training

By Tony Karniss

n April 7th, 8th and 9th, Back Country Horsemen of Washington (BCHW) and Washington Trail Association (WTA) put on a 3-day Chainsaw Training and Certification Class. Fifteen instructors were involved in using the New Thinking Sawyer Program. There were 30 students: 12 new folks to become (A) sawyers, 14 recert sawyers to become (B) sawyers and 2 Sawyer recerts for (CSE) for WTA and Aaron Pederson from Region 6 US/SF. With the help of Emily Snyder from WTA, we had exceptionally good training.

Using the new classroom training curriculum and the new field evaluation and training, all the students liked the field evaluation and more instructor involvement in showing them how to make the different cuts to help them to better their sawing skills. We lucked out and had pleasant weather and a lot of good logs to cut within walking distance of the classroom. We took advantage of the weather and were able to saw more to work toward bettering their sawing skills.

There were folks from five user groups: Back Country Horseman of Washington, Washington Trails Association, Evergreen Mountain Bike Alliance, Washington State ATV Association and the Oregonist Association.

Another new feature was a collaborative potluck for the evening meal, which went over great, along with a nice fire. There were a lot of good sawing questions and good answers, along with a great comradery of stories and a lot of information passed from other user groups of their trail projects for the year.

The result was just an awesome saw training.

Finding The Good In A Bad Situation

By Mike Walcker,, Director, Wenatchee Valley chapter BCHW

t's something we all think about. What happens when things go wrong on a trail ride when we are miles away from the nearest emergency service and have an injured rider or an injured or distressed animal? Well, in one incident last year, cool heads, planning, and thoughtful preparation were the key, but it also allowed for a swift response and, in the end, a new productive partnership.

Several of our members had packed into a remote area out of the Blackpine Horse camp in Chelan County. While doing trail work, a pack animal was injured and ultimately had to be put down at the work site. With a large amount of gear to move, along with riders, the group was in a difficult situation. That is where planning and preparation came into play. A remote satellite radio/communication device had been packed, and they were able to contact a member who had stayed behind in Western Washington. They were able to accurately assess their situation and gave good information for help to be dispatched. (cool heads!)

The person they contacted called Joanne Walcker, President of the Wenatchee Valley Chapter of BCHW, requesting assistance. Within an hour, Joanne had contacted Ken and Terry Tinchner, seasoned packers from Wenatchee who didn't hesitate to load up gear, animals, and provisions and drive to the Blackpine horse camp to ride into the members in distress. Ken, the Vice President of the Wenatchee Chapter, reported that they had made the trip up to the group, loaded up supplies, and had the group out of the woods in less than 12 hours.

Terry Tinchner walking a loaded animal to insure the packs were properly attached and balanced on the horse.

If this were the end of the story, it would be, with exception of the loss of a valued stock animal, a success story on many accounts. It would highlight the importance of planning and having the proper equipment and show the importance of all of us being willing to lend a hand whenever we are asked. But it grew from there. Also in the conversation during this event was a group called WASART, an acronym for Washington State Animal Response Team. WASART is a volunteer group specially equipped to respond to situations around the state where animals need a rescue for any reason.

Not all backcountry horse people are aware of WASART, and they (WASART) were not well versed in packing supplies and gear when the rescue is miles from the nearest road.

So, a meeting was set up to introduce us to their group and their group to our pack animal experts.

We met at the Appleatchee horse club in Wenatchee on September 10, 2022, in the covered arena.

WASART brought a very impressive truck and trailer combination with a trailer full of rescue equipment. Ken and Terry Tinchner, Mike and Shawna St. Clair, and Dennis Jaspers, all members of the Wenatchee Valley Chapter and seasoned packers, brought horses and packs. Several other local horse folks came to observe the event. Tarps were laid out, and rescue tools were arraigned on the tarps so the weight did not exceed 70 lbs. They were then bundled up and tied to the panniers to show what an animal could carry, how it should be packed, and the best ways to move the equipment to the rescue site.

All in all, it was a great day with many new friendships made and tons of good information exchanged. This entire event reminded us of the basics of backcountry adventures and what to do when something goes wrong. It also reminds us that after the event, always look for the good in a bad situation.

Ride With Speed and Ease

Horses in mist around pond

By Louis Walton

ou know you are truly fortunate when you have friends that talk you into a fabulous adventure. Lynn Herrington and Marian Carson said, "Let's go to Iceland and ride Icelandic horses."

Icelandic horses have an interesting background. The Vikings selected horses based on their size (fit in a boat) and strength (ability to work hard). In 982, all imports of horses were stopped; therefore, all their horses are purebreds. On average, they stand 12 – 14 hands high and weigh 600 – 800 pounds. They have a sweet temperament and are smart, cooperative, and willing to work. All true per our experience.

We started our journey by touring the capital of Reykjavik for a few days. On 07.25.22, we flew to Husavik in north Iceland to ride at Saltvik Farms. Our first task was to get the horses in from their overnight feeding in a lush green field. The herd charged in, and it was an exhilarating sight with many colors, manes, and tails flying high. Next, we each picked out a saddle. I had never ridden English; what did I know? I could have used one without knee rolls, which bruised my knees. Otherwise, a good seat works on whatever saddle style you use. The staff helped us to bridle and place the saddle. I started to groom the mane but was told, "No, we don't do that." "Grooming" entails getting the dirt off the back where the saddle sits.

Then our horse wrangler, not the Icelandic word for our horse/ride manager, Meika, asked what kind of horse we each wanted. Sister Sue requested one that was fast, adventurous, and a bit naughty – she lived to regret that. I asked for the safest, best trained, take-care-of -me, and kind horse. Gylfi was my favorite. His To'lt, a classic four-beat gait, was smooth, easy to manage, always responsive, and all-around sweet. I also rode Freya, who was Marian's favorite. Another great horse. Being the oldest rider in the group, I was very well treated and got to ride at the rear of the troop. The best spot for taking pictures.

We all learned one Icelandic word from Meika: YAYA. That means to mount up and be ready to take off at a To'lt. Except for the first day, a 9-mile training run, the next four days ranged from 18 to 24 miles.

Herd coming in

The days began with a hearty breakfast we used to make our lunch. By about 10 AM, we mounted and hustled over the remarkable volcanic landscape with a herd of up to 70 horses. Some riders were at the front leading the herd. Others followed behind on narrow trails just wide enough for horses' hooves. Be careful, or you might hit your boots on the brush at the trail edge. Check out the size of those saddles from the rear view.

At noon we stopped for the lunch break. All the tack was taken off the horses, and they mingled in a coral with the herd. Soon we were assigned a fresh horse to tack up. A quick "YAYA' and away we went for the afternoon ending up back at the farm or, for one night, the hut. Despite the sun never going down, we never had trouble sleeping at night.

The landscape was crossed by many rivers. Due to the amount of rainfall and glaciers, crossing the Laxa' River informed me that my boots were NOT waterproof as advertised. That combination of long legs and a short horse equaled wet feet. The hearty Icelander on our trip dismounted and walked across. Exiting the river, he pounded his chest and exclaimed, "So refreshing!" I think he had a flask in his pocket for warming purposes.

The riding terrain was varied and mostly rolling, except for some rock walls. The land comes from volcanic eruptions, which weather. We were prepared with rain gear but were fortunate not to need it much. Icelanders pride themselves on being good stewards of their land. I never saw a single piece of trash around the farm or on the trails.

Our hosts were welcoming, friendly, and fun. We were treated to an awards ceremony after our last supper. Bjarni, the owner and a Viking, adorned with the horned hat, was a hoot at the ceremony. Meika, in her big red spectacles, awarded the certificates marking our accomplishments and recording our favorite horse.

Marian, Sue, and Lynn received their certificates together. Turns out there was a special surprise for me. Hugs all around with a special "hug" from Bjarni, who, when I whispered in his ear that I had never been hugged by a Viking, picked me up and swung me around with giggles and applause from the group. I guess getting to be the oldest comes with some surprises and perks. Certainly, a fabulous adventure I would love to repeat. Maybe in 2024.
